Spring

Spring brought the students from inside the heated dorms and classroom buildings out on the freshly mowed lawns. The slow, easy pace of spring afternoons gave the students the opportunity to dream of the future or discuss the current topics of the day.

As the short cold winter days gave way to the warmer, longer spring days, the familiar sounds of the spring athletic competition could be heard from beyond north campus; the sights and sounds of social club pledging filled the early spring air with sounds of laughter and harassment; the steady cadence of the military could be detected as advanced ROTC cadets prepared for summer camp.

April afternoons saw the students leave the campus and head for the cooling waters of the surrounding rivers and lakes. Weekends usually brought those winter-delayed parties. The spring break brought a ten-day relief from classes and enabled the student to prepare for the final month of school.

May brought the excitement of graduation. Before the seniors could grasp their diplomas, GRE's had to be taken. As the seniors filed forward to receive their diplomas, they looked back and remembered those left behind; the ones that would begin a new school year in September.

The Military Banquet highlighted the activities of the spring semester.

April witnessed the student senate sponsoring "Play Day." This day was a welcomed relief from the class activity.

Pinning ceremonies highlighted the graduation exercises for newly commissioned officers in the United States Army.

Patsy Hill enjoys the spring afternoon with a fast set of tennis.

Dr. Ralph A. Phelps Jr. presents the trophy to the winning team in the Ouachita Relays.

"Go-Go Girls" in the Mr.-Miss OBU contest perform for the audience.

Unusual talent was displayed in the Mr.-Miss OBU contest in the spring.

Senator J. William Fulbright spoke on campus during his campaign for re-election to the United States Senate.

Summer

Dr. Ralph A. Phelps Jr. and former U.S. Postmaster General Marvin Watson prepare to enter the First Baptist Church for summer graduating ceremonies.

Summer brings a welcome vacation for many students; for others it presents the opportunity to pick up those courses passed over in the regular session. Those who choose to attend the summer sessions find their mornings filled with classes and class discussions; afternoons filled with studying and trips to the river.

Guest lecturers, summer production of plays, Head Start programs, Upward Bound projects, and Economic Workshops offer the students a chance to broaden their interests, meet and work with new and old friends.

August graduation is the highlight of the summer term. The commencement exercises at the First Baptist Church add to a colorful completion of a summer career.

As September nears, the pop of leather can be heard from the practice field as the Tigers begin their two-a-day workouts in preparation for AIC competition.

With the first days of September, summer fades into fall and students return to begin a new school year.

*Jan Phillips and Carol Quick perform in the summer theater production of Rumpelstiltskin.*

Summer

Mrs. Cora McHenry speaks to an Upward Bound session held on campus during the summer.

Ouachita students spend many summer afternoons on the small tributaries of the Ouachita River.

Illustrated stories were used in the Head Start Program to encourage communications and a sense of understanding.

Ted Boswell spoke on constitutional revision at the second Public Affairs Conference.

Winter

As the football season drew to a close and the Peanut Bowl was won, the campus settled down for the winter days ahead. Rockefeller gym was the center of most campus activity during winter weeks as the Tiger basketball team tied for second in the AIC. After the regular season was over the cagers went ahead to win the AIC Tournament at Pine Bluff only to lose to Henderson for the right to represent District 17 in the NAIA Tournament in Kansas City.

The Tigerettes were ranked third in the nation in women's basketball and received an invitation to attend the national playoffs at Gallup, N. M.

February was highlighted by Religious Emphasis Week with Don Kessinger, shortstop for the Chicago Cubs, and Grady Nutt, vice president of the Southern Baptist Convention, appearing as speakers.

The journalism department and the political science departments sponsored workshops for the benefit of high school students. Max Harrelson, the AP chief at the UN, spoke at the journalism workshop. Mr. Harrelson graduated from Ouachita College.

A. U. Williams Stadium was bordered by the rising waters of the Ouachita River in an unusual winter flood.

North campus residents were threatened once again by rising Ouachita River.

Cliff Springer discusses Parent's Day activities with Tom Chambers and his parents.

January brought registration for the spring semester.

Winter

January graduates are sworn in as officers in the United States Army.

Coach Buddy Bob Benson is carried off the field after the Peanut Bowl victory. Ouachita won by a score of 39-6.

Fall

Fall brought the reconvening of school. Wide-eyed freshmen caught their first glimpse of college life. The meeting of old friends and the making of new friends were the objectives of the first days of September.

Schedules had to be made and advisors seen before registration. Registration meant long lines, threat of classes closing, and the deflated check book. But they did get through and, as usual, most of their schedules came out the way they wanted them after all.

The early September morning silence was broken by the traditional "Good morning, Mr. Tiger" as the freshmen became an integrated part of campus society.

Preparing for Dad's Day, building of homecoming floats, the homecoming football victory, the defeating of the fourth and fifth-rated NAIA football teams, attending class meetings and going to school functions were among the happier moments of the fall.

Warm fall days lingered into December but the cold days of winter eventually came, driving the students inside the snug dorms and classroom buildings.

Pat Philliber registers for her senior name plate during fall registration.

Tiger Day crowning ceremonies highlight the day's events for senior students visiting the campus in November.

Warm afternoons gave students a chance to relax on the campus lawn.

The Danish Gymnastics Team visited the campus in late September.

Randell Everett, Carol Hargis, and Dr. Ralph Phelps Jr. attend to the business of crowning the new Tiger Day Queen.

Fall

Pep rally skits were used during the fall semester to bolster Tiger Spirit.

Football games provided excitement during the autumn as the Tigers finished second in the conference.

Homecoming floats took many hours of student work to provide a spectacular homecoming parade.
