ouachitonian

A gold-painted, cluttered office in Lakeside was the setting for many late-night work sessions for the Ouachitonian staff. Here the editor and his secretarial staff did page layouts, wrote copy and proofread pages.

Since its first publication, the book has striven to capture the memorable events, activities and people of each year and preserve them in lasting and attractive form. Recording the individual of Ouachita gives our yearbook not only its purpose, but also its name, Ouachitonian.

The staff added 28 pages to the 1970 edition, making it the largest in its publication history. Mosaic layouts were used this year to replace the informal style used in previous years.

The photo staff of the department of journalism was composed of students enrolled in photography classes or those who had a strong interest in photography. The photographers took and processed all pictures for the Signal, the Ouachitonian, Alumni Bulletin and the campus news bureau.

Joe Class headed the staff as chief photographer. He was assisted by part-time workers David Lowery and Mark Pillow.

The staff renovated darkroom facilities and purchased several new pieces of equipment with the aid of publication and personal funds. They attempted to display a more complete understanding of the University student as an individual by directing their efforts toward creativity.

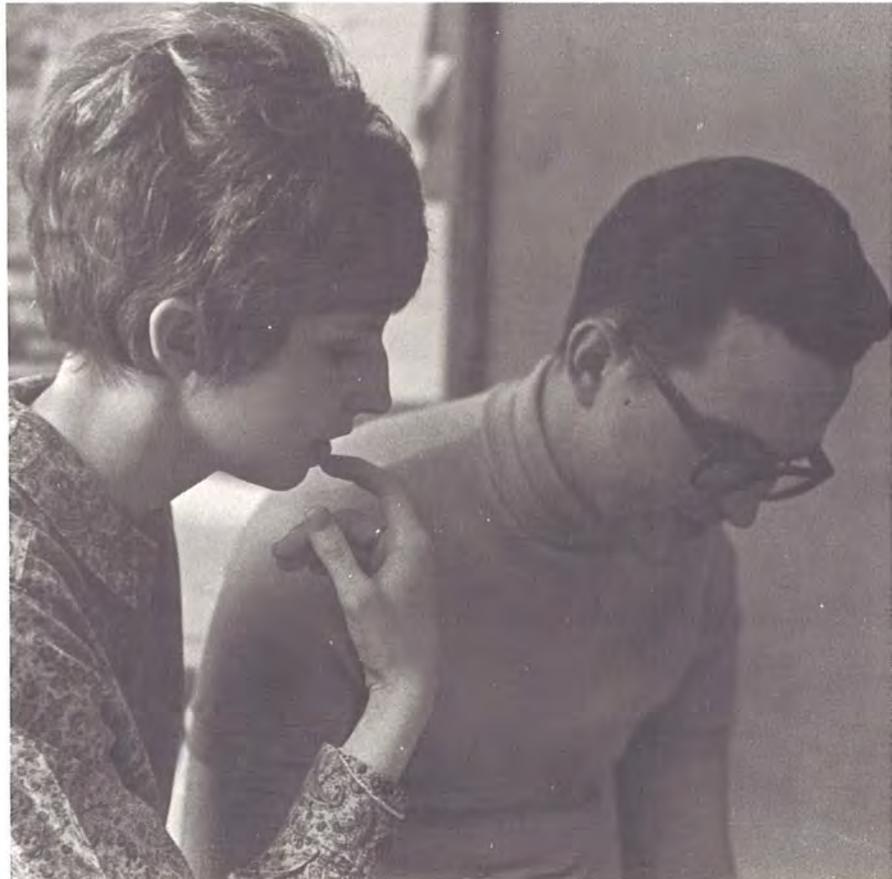

signal

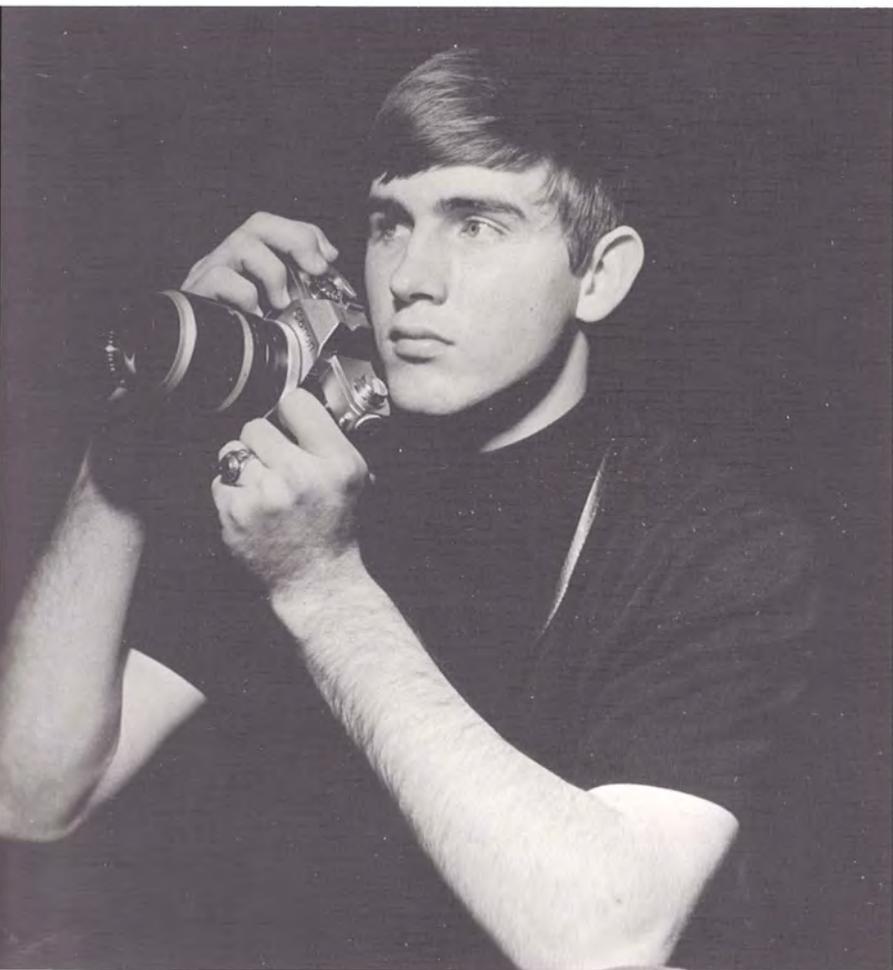

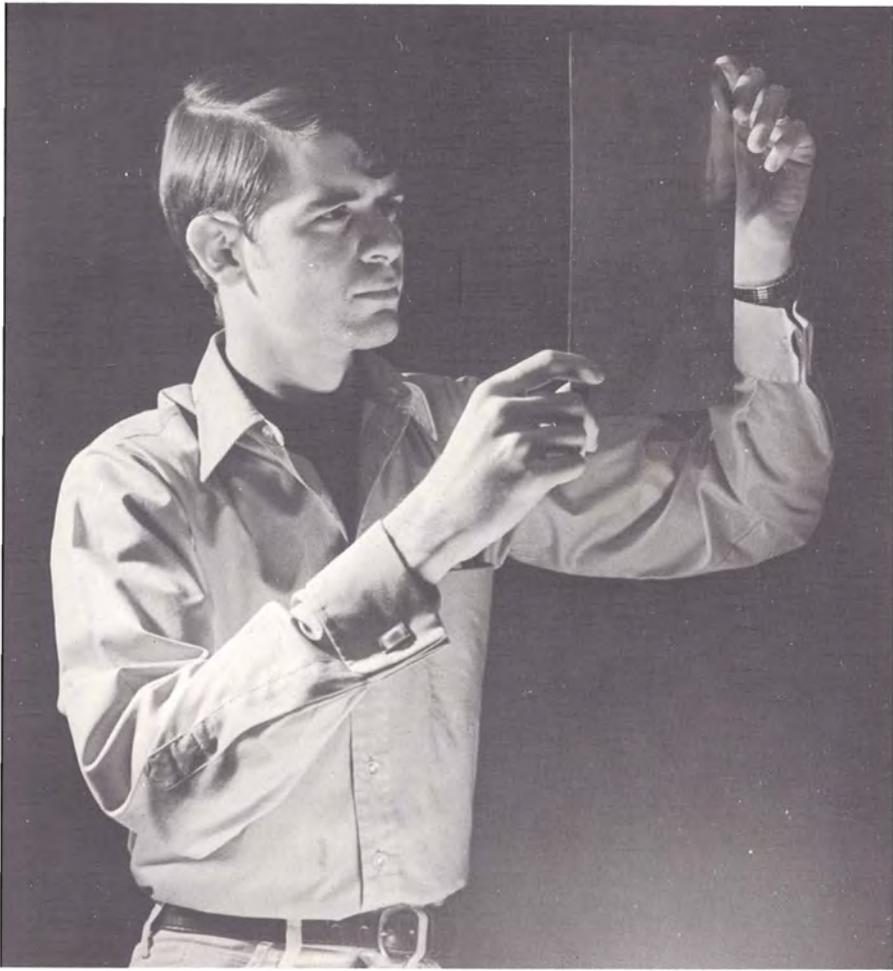

Frenzied deadlines, phones that never ceased ringing and letters from concerned students and irate politicians were part of the regular working day of the Signal, OBU's official student newspaper.

A team composed of five staff members determined the editorial policy of the bi-weekly paper. Editorial statements reflected the opinions of a majority of the editorial board, not necessarily reflecting the views of the University's administration. Undergraduates handled the photography, news reporting, editing and feature writing.

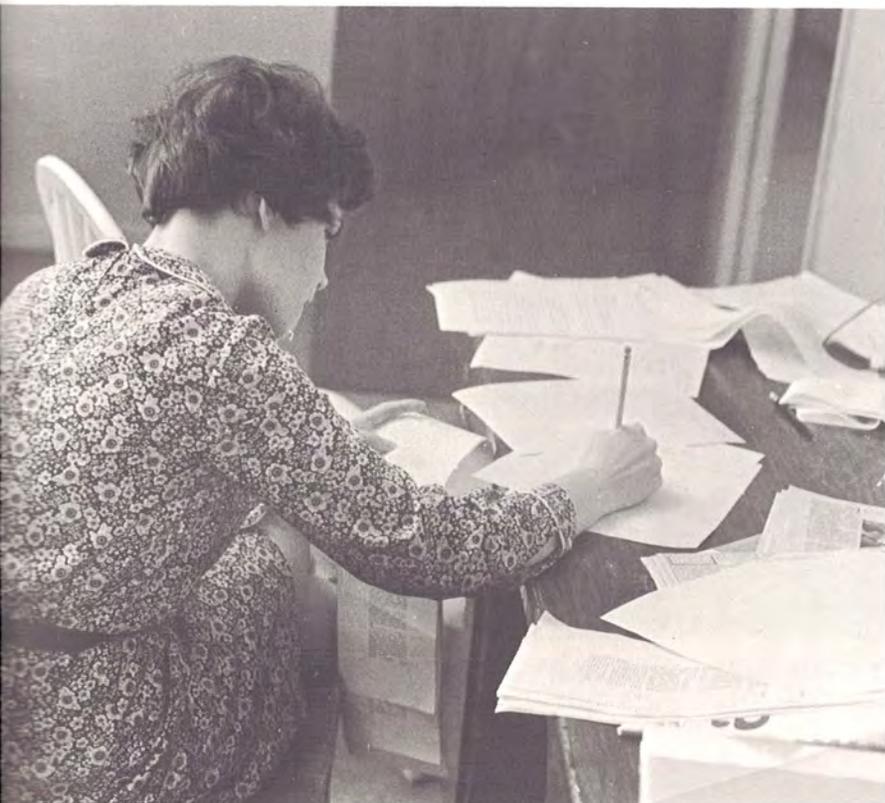

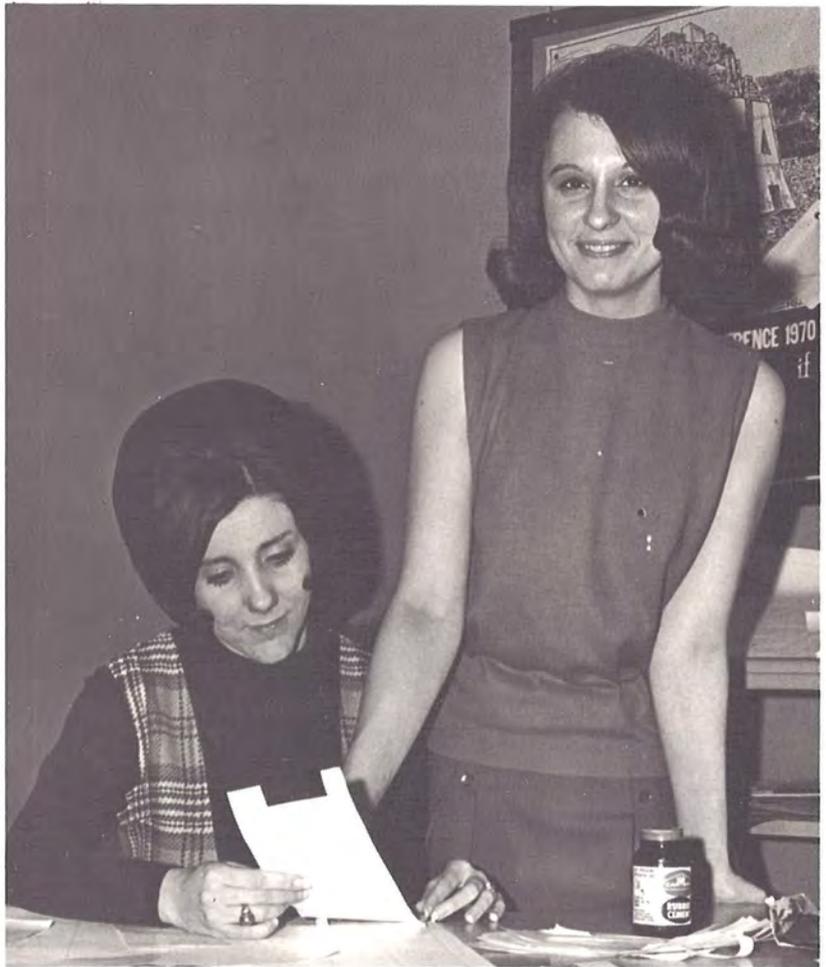

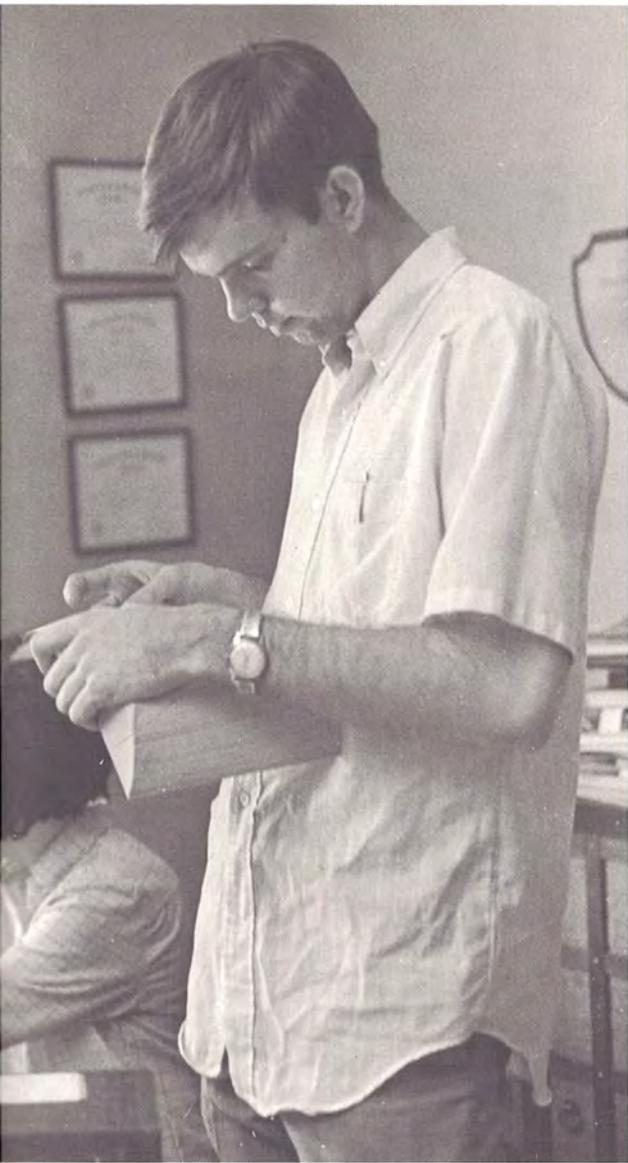

Boasting a circulation of 2,000, Signal distribution was made easier with the placement of six new purple circulation stands located on campus.

Special pictorial editions covered the Campus Beauty Pageant and the theatre opening of Dennis Holt's original version of "Antigone."

THE INDIVIDUAL
is basically competitive.
One way an athlete achieves satisfaction
is by releasing his energy (flexing his ability)
in sports.

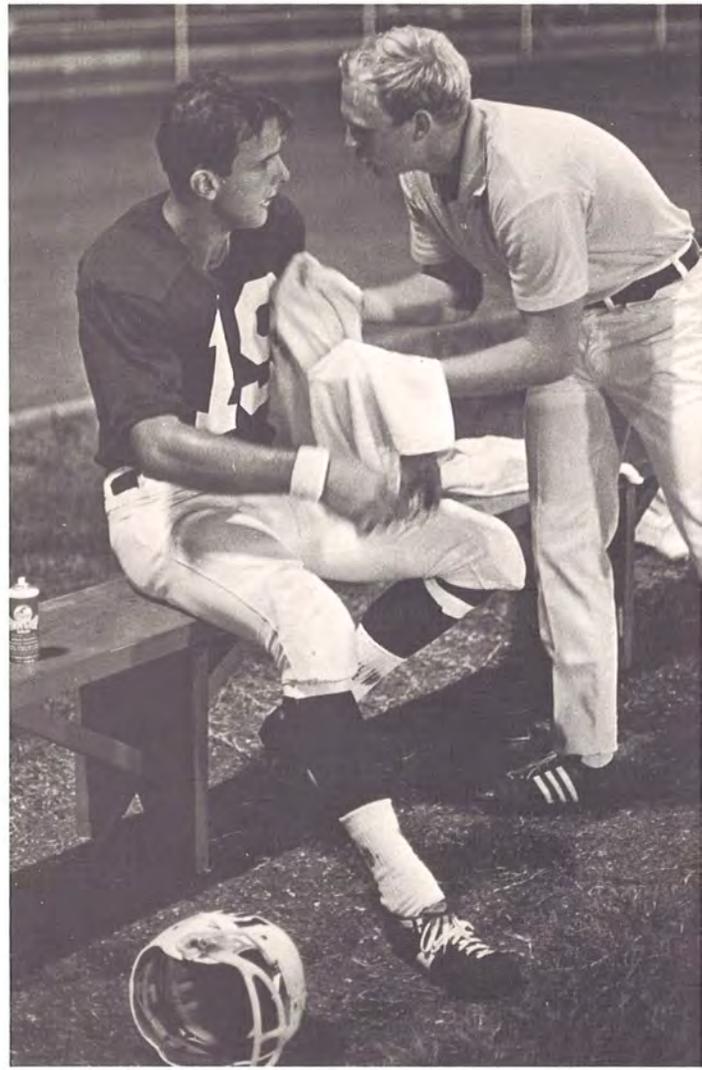

COMPETITION

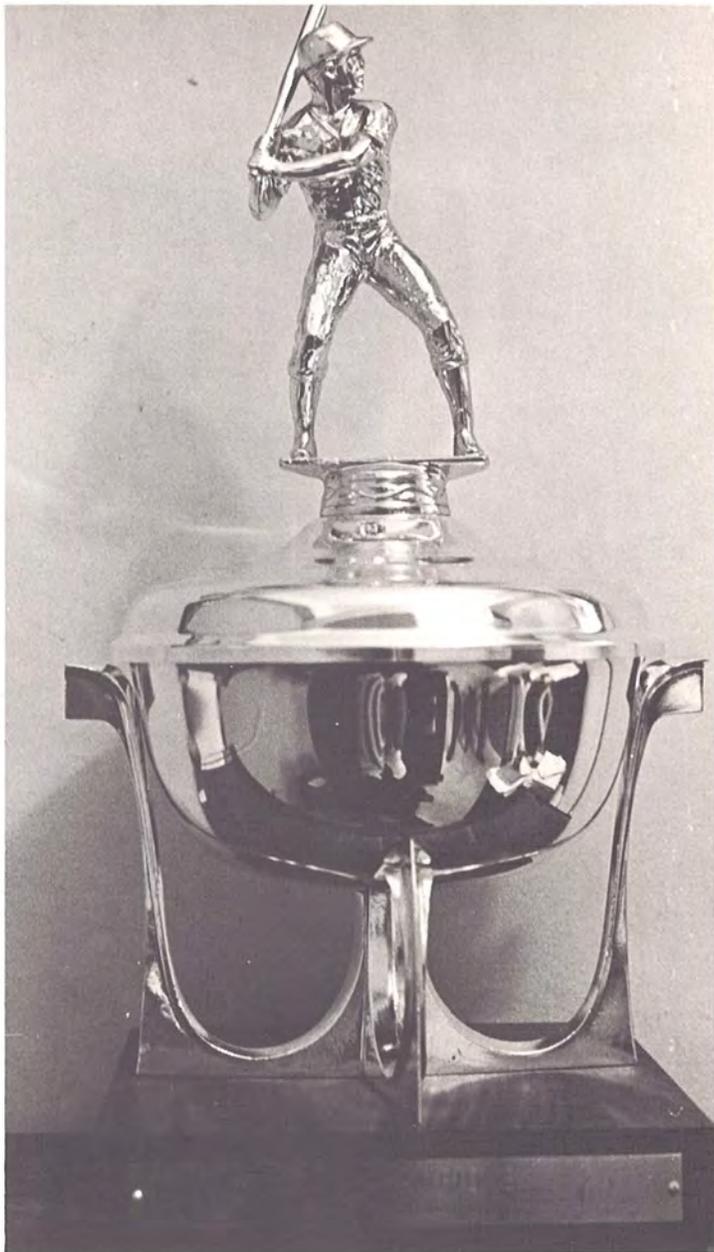

competition

com-pe-ti-tion n. 1: act of competing; a contact between rivals; a match.

More of an understanding of self is generated through physical contact with others. Physical expression continues at an accelerated pace with seemingly undying energy and desire for competition.

Cheerleaders. Somehow it means more than just to lead cheers. It means setting an example for the entire student body. They did. Many followed.

TOP ROW: Nora Risher and LeElla Ratcliff (Tiger), Kathy Knight, and Donna Mears. BOTTOM ROW: Kathy Otwell, Becky Fulbright, Linda Harris, Margie Royston, and Donita Austin.

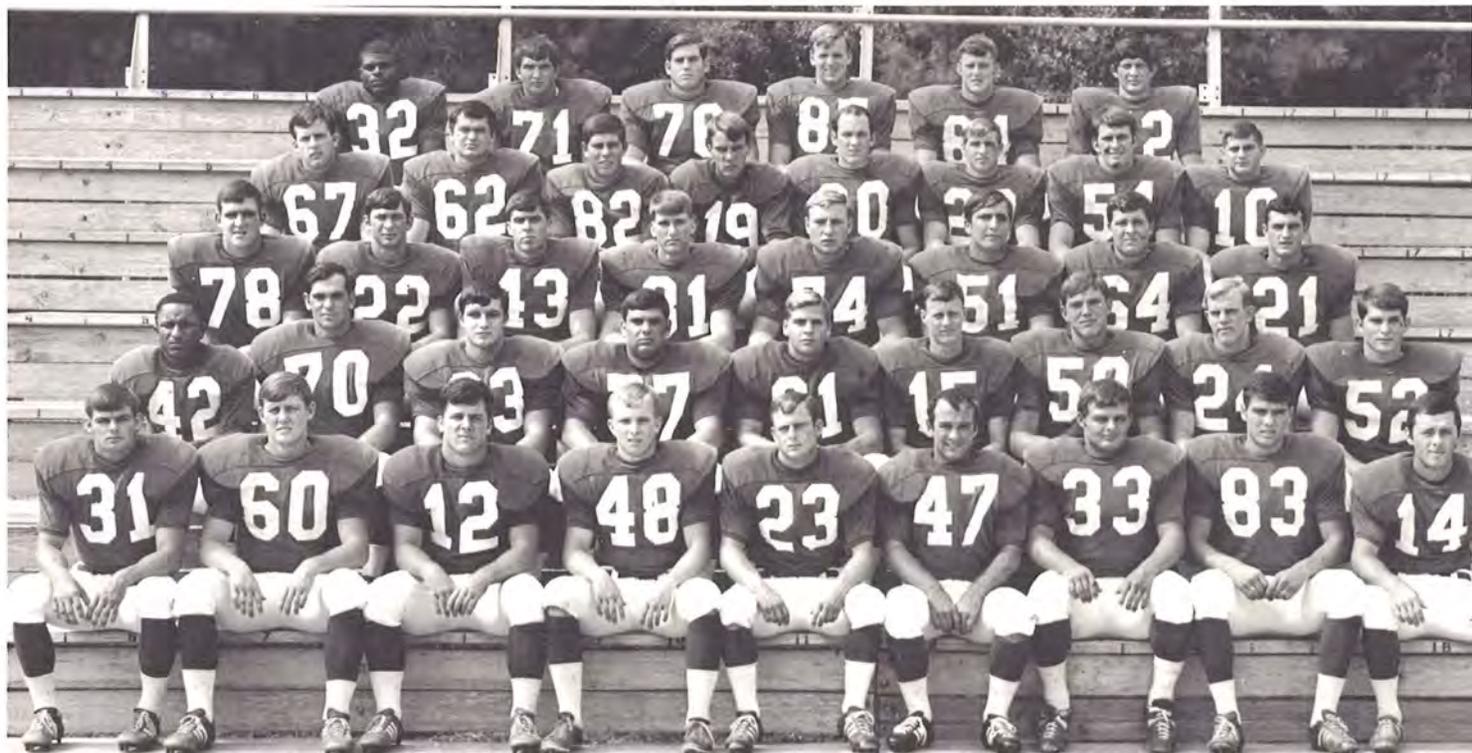

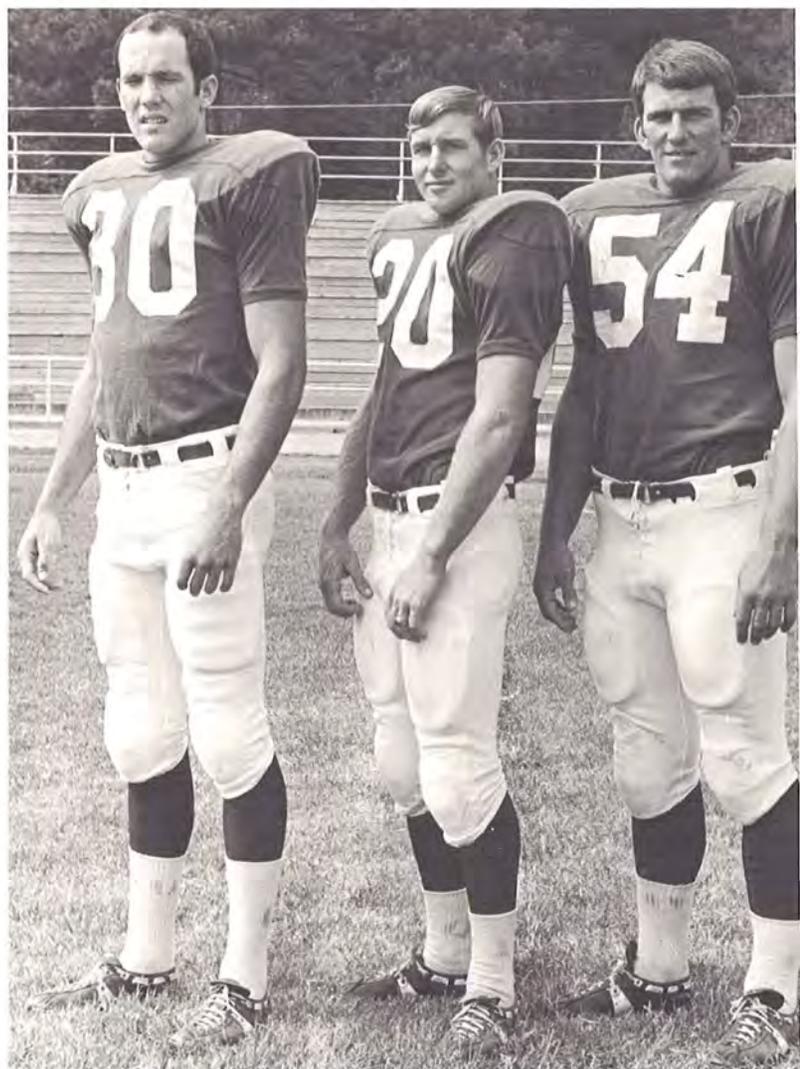

football

A new offense,
a new defense,
new faces in the lineup,
new positions
and two new assistant coaches were all part of the 1969 football season.

The youthful Tigers, led by seniors
Eddie Buffington, John Wayne Cunningham,
Bobby Crouch, Mickey DeLamar, Doug Freeze, Cliff Harris and Dennis Pate, posted a 5-5 record.
No team had an easy time with OBU, as the widest margin of defeat was only seven points.

Harris, a senior safety, was signed to a three-year football contract by the Dallas Cowboys at the close of the season.

Much of the time in two-a-day practices
during the spring and actual game performances during the season was spent in learning the new offensive and defensive plays. Joining the coaching staff was Jimmy Jones and George Baker.

BACK ROW: James Reynolds, Ronnie Coble, James Lough, Gary Deffenbaugh, Charles Hesse and Calvin James.
