Seniors selected for Who's Who honors

Twenty-eight students were selected for Who's Who honors by their senior classmates. These twenty-eight honorees were selected on the basis of their character, leadership, scholarship, and potentialities. Senior class members voted for the twenty-eight students they felt most deserving. The ballots were then given to the Student Senate Who's Who committee and a list was made of the fifty-six candidates receiving the most votes and the nominations. The nominees names were presented to a faculty-administrative committee who selected the final twenty-eight students. The final list was approved by President Grant.

During his presidency here, Dr. Grant has led the university from a low point in not only financial areas, but also in enrollment. Contrary to the trend of most private colleges and universities, Ouachita's enrollment continues upward.

Many tactics are used for recruitment and fundraising. Dr. Grant and William D. Downs Jr., director of public relations, discuss pamphlets used for this purpose.

IMPACT!

No matter what the situation or event, Dr. Grant gives that added attention that makes Ouachita what Ouachita is. Vicki Phelps finds that Dr. Grant devotes time to students no matter what the situation.

Twin goal important; Grant stresses liberal arts

Within the five years that Dr. Daniel R. Grant had been president of Ouachita, the institution had undertaken physical as well as academic transitions unlike any other in the history of the university.

The Evans Student Center, Lile Hall and the Mabee Fine Arts Center were the most obvious physical transitions of the Grant administration.

These were the results of a mammoth Advancement Campaign that was overseen by Dr. Grant with Dr. Ben Elrod leading the campaign. Most of these activities started shortly after he came to Ouachita in 1970 from Vanderbilt University.

Not concerned only with OBU, Dr. Grant toured the Asian countries of Thailand and Japan observing Baptist-related schools in that area.

Stressing Ouachita's commitment to both academic and Christian excellence, Dr. Grant maintained the university image of a liberal arts school as opposed to the concept of a "preacher factory" or Bible college."

His "open door-open ear" policy, in which students could relay encountered problems to the president, remained a part of the promise made to the institution when first accepting his position as president of Ouachita Baptist University.

His "open door-open ear" policy is evident through participation in all phases of university activities.

IMPACT!

Discussing future plans, Dr. Elrod works closely with Dr. Grant in the area of development for the university.

Degree plans, approval of courses added or dropped and junior-senior course credits—all of these were areas in which Dr. Carl Goodson assisted students with their academic affairs.

Staying in close touch with the faculty, he developed curricula for the 1974-75 school year.

All academic phases of the University fell within the responsibilities of Dr. Goodson.

Keeping the university's budget out of the red, James Orr, vice president for finance, reported all fiscal activities and carried out the general nature of business operations.

Accounting and preparation of the institution's budget were included in his job responsibilities.

Commercial property that was owned by Ouachita was handled through his office.

Working directly under Dr. Grant, Dr. Ben Elrod headed fund-raising campaigns that made Life Hall, Evans Student Center and the Mabee Fine Arts Center develop into realities.

Conducting the Ouachita Advancement Campaign, he organized development programs for Ouachita in Little Rock, Hot Springs, El Dorado and Arkadelphia.

Other job responsibilities of the vice president for development were alumni and placement, recruitment and the development of the university both present and future.

Trustees assist development

Working directly with Dr. Grant, any people, such as the three vice presidents and the board of trustees, are involved in the academic, financial and social aspects of Ouachita Baptist University.

Assisting the president of the university, the vice president for academic affairs, vice president for development and vice president for finance engineered and carried out the plans for the development and growth of the institution—recruitment, funding and financial strength.

The fulfilling of their responsibilities insured that Ouachita Baptist University existed financially, academically and socially.

Advising in financial and administrative decisions, the board of trustees was selected by the Arkansas Baptist Convention which owned and operated Ouachita. The board met in quarterly sessions throughout the year. All meetings were held on the OBU campus.

The trustees as well as the president and vice presidents worked together to assist Ouachita in maintaining its commitment to academic and Christian excellence.

Each year is different. Different activities and new students. Even the administration adapted to the 1974-75 year with some new and returning members.

Larry Bone, the new admissions counselor, took over the responsibility of recruiting and screening students.

Shortly thereafter, he organized the OBU Student Foundation. The Foundation was formed for the purposes of recruiting, making scholarships available to upperclassmen and educating the students as to the operation of the University. Not intended as a political organization, the group helped in relieving the recruitment office of its heavy work load.

This year the dean of arts and sciences gained assistance through the naming of Mike Arrington, an OBU history professor, to the position of assistant to the dean of arts and sciences. Also, he was the director of academic skills and development.

The director of plant maintenance supervised his staff in the upgrading of several campus buildings. Many dorms were either repainted, recarpeted, air conditioned or any of the above combinations. The destruction of Lakeside made way for the completion of the fine arts building.

Overseeing the refinishing of the bowling lanes during the first part of the school year, the assistant student center director also supervised the operation of the game room. He was also involved in "operation mainstream mobility." This was an attempt to involve every OBU student in some sort of campus activity •

Dr. Ed Coulter glances across the football field into the crowd of some 2,000 high school students during choir day.

During the 1973-74 year, the financial aids office distributed approximately one million dollars of student aid. That amount was exceeded this year as a result of a larger enrollment and a hike in attendance costs.

Financial aid, in the form of grants, loans, student employment and discounts made education possible for students pressed sorely by the soaring costs of higher education.

Along with a new bookstore manager came variations on what the bookstore "used to be."

Buying books for the 1974-75 year was basically a self-service operation, but when students needed assistance, they had it. Result—faster service, but longer lines at the cash registers.

Traffic tickets and chapel. These things were synonomous with the dean of students' office.

Men's housing, the Health Service campus safety and traffic and chapel records were all the responsibilities of this office.

In addition to these activities, it was hoped that a counseling program would be initiated for both personal and career problems encountered by the student. Another program for the year was "Mainstream Mobility." It was devised to involve every student in an extra-curricular activity.

Working closely with the dean's office, the dean of women made women's housing assignments and assisted women students with any complications that they encountered. She counseled and was director of the AWS.

(Second Row) Lane Strother, associate director of development; Katherine Summerlin, periodical librarian; Frank Taylor, registrar; William Trantham, dean of the School of Music.

For the 1974-75 year, "anticipation" described the School of Music. With the completion of the Mabee Fine Arts Center on the north side of the main campus, the School of Music packed up and moved from an inadequate Mitchell Hall on the south side of the main campus.

According to the Dean's office for the School of Music, 170 music students were enrolled for the fall semester.

Among the conveniences of the new center were a recital hall, practice rooms and, best of all, "a generally more comfortable atmosphere in which to work and study."

Keeping up with all student happenings and activities, the director of student activities calendared all activities, whether they were concerts or workshops.

All academic records were handled through the registrar's office. Issuance of transcripts, permanent folders and V.A. certification was held and conducted by the Registrar.

The fact that registration was conducted under one roof instead of having it situated in different buildings like in past years, eliminated some confusion and accounted for a more organized manner of registration.

News releases of newsworthy events and achievements on the campus were sent to different news media throughout the state under the direction of the assistant director of public relations. He supervised the News Bureau which was responsible for news releases, sports information and photography •

Students majoring or interested in religion were offered a study of Biblical Hebrew language for the first time at UCA.

The Ralph Smith lectures continued as the Division of Religion fostered the advancement of the study of God's word and one's self.

The School of Music united in the effort of moving into and organizing the new Arts building. This year marked the largest enrollment of music majors—a total of 168 students.

COOPERATIVE EDUCATION

Ouachita's Cooperative Education program allowed students a chance to earn college credit while working full time at a job that would help prepare them for a future occupation.

According to Dr. Richard Mills, director of the program at Ouachita, Cooperative Education was a "process by which students infiltrate periods of work with periods of study" to provide them with a basis for a career selection.

The students worked for a period of six months as fully paid employees at a job which would best prepare them for their future vocations. Their employers knew they were "cooperative" students and provided them with a variety of experience in different jobs for a "total perspective," according to Dr. Mills.

Students received up to four hours credit for each six-month work experience. Mills said that students could also take up to four hours at another institution while on the job for a total of eight hours credit. Work experiences were limited to three.

To be able to participate, a student must have been at least a second semester sophomore, with at least a 2.3 grade point average and recommended by their faculty advisor. Students under 21 had to have the consent and signature of their parents. Mills said it was desirable for students to go through a series of counseling sessions before going to work.

Designed primarily for the liberal arts student, the program at Ouachita began July 1, 1973 upon receipt of a federal grant provided for planning and development of the Cooperative Education program. The grant was for three years with the University assuming total responsibility after that.

Dr. Mills said the fall semester of '74 and the spring semester of this year were "primarily for planning, hiring of staff, setting up our committee and policy making."

A feasibility study was conducted in the spring with regard to faculty, student and employer contacts during this period for the purpose of providing work slots for the program.

The first students were placed beginning July 1 of this year. These students, according to Dr. Mills, worked until December 31 and returned to school for the spring semester. There are currently nine students participating.

Dr. Mills said that of 260 potential employees sampled, about 90 questionnaires were returned which were "positive." These 90 were then contacted on a one-to-one basis. Some employees were found to be unacceptable because the jobs they offered were not along the "pre-professional" lines set down by the cooperative program. "However, there were more quality positions than we could actually fill," said Dr. Mills.

Mills said his staff was constantly trying to develop quality slots for students, with a preference toward larger companies. One of those companies, the Xerox Corporation at Rochester, N.Y., is the third largest cooperative employer with more than 350 students. Mills said Xerox hired better than 95 per cent of its cooperative students and retained more than 90 per cent on first time employment.

Dr. Mills said, "Xerox had seen the value of Cooperative Education and had made it an integral part of their employment program •"

BAPTIST STUDENT UNION

The Arkansas State Baptist Student Union Convention was held Oct. 4-6 at the First Baptist Church in Arkadelphia.

"Sharing His Love" was the theme of this year's convention. "Approximately 600 students from 18 BSU's on college campuses across Arkansas were expected to attend," said John Halbert, BSU director at Ouachita Baptist University.

Speaking at the convention was Doug Manning, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hereford, Tex.; Stan Nelson, of the Southern Baptist Convention Missions Board of Richmond, Vir.; David George, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Stuttgart and Nathan Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Arkadelphia.

Nelson, associate secretary for Missionary Personnel of the Foreign Missions Board, spoke at the Sunday morning session.

"Nelson works primarily with college students who are interested in missions work as a vocation," said Nathan Porter. "He is also in charge of selection, appointment and orientation of missionaries for the Journeyman Missionary Program," Porter added.

Holt, "The Last Bouquet," won the Arkansas division of the Theatre competition. It was the only original entry in the Festival, and won first place in costume design and execution, and scenery; Joe Cantu was named "best performer."

"The Last Bouquet" also won first place in the national playwriting competition of the California Olympiad of the Arts, which was sponsored by the Edwin Markham Society, a national society based in California that was founded in honor of American poet Edwin Markham.

Holt has directed both high school and college theaters and has been at Ouachita since 1955. While he was teaching at Malvern High School his players were selected as the only high school performers in the nation to present the featured play at the national festival of the National Thespian Society.

The Ouachita Theatre under Holt's direction has been chosen twice to perform the featured college play in the National Dramatic Arts Conference, and his version of "Antigone" was featured at San Antonio's "HemisFair '68" and in several theaters throughout the nation.

"College directing is more mature but less enthusiastic than high school directing is. There is a great deal of wasted dramatic talent in high schools," he sighed, "but in college, students are more sure of what they're doing and take their work more seriously."

Writers have always been admired by Holt, but he isn't really sure how he became interested in writing. "I used to read things and say, 'I'd like to be able to write like that,' but there was not one special event that made me want to be a writer," he reflected.

There wasn't any one particular thing that inspired "You Would Have Understood Me, Had You Waited" either, but Holt did have some definite feelings about artists whom society ignored.

"We're living in a society that doesn't respect the artist. He has no power to demand respect, but he may be the only person who takes the time to stop and really live life," he noted.

In Holt's opinion, Dowson was a good example of someone who never received any real recognition while he was living. There was a special kind of beauty that came through in his poetry, Holt felt, and it came as a result of his alienation and suffering.

The night of Dowson's death was the setting for "You Would Have Understood Me, Had You Waited." Through the use of flashbacks, Holt recreated various parts of the poet's life. Dowson and a friend, Robert Sherard, stayed up that entire night talking and reminiscing. Holt used two acts and an epilogue to tell the story.

The epilogue was set in 1937 at a commemorative service for Dowson. A notice of the service was printed in the "London Daily Mail" and it caused a spark of interest in his poetry to grow.

The titles "Gone With the Wind" and "Days of Wine and Roses" both came from Dowson's poetry, along with several other titles and phrases •

"Saints and poets should be read while we have them among us," was a paraphrased statement by the poet and playwright Thornton Wilder. It was also the idea for a new play written by drama professor Dennis

Holt's play, "You Would Have Understood Me, Had You Waited," is written with Ernest Dowson, a 19th cen-

English poet who had been overlooked in many literature courses and anthologies. Holt discovered Dowson's poetry through his own reading, and realized that many writers had likely been neglected due to their own unusual personalities.

The play was aimed basically at students, Holt said, because it premiered at the American College Theatre Festival in Little Rock the latter part of November. "I feel that young people will look on this subject with interest because many of them are similar to Dowson and feel a sense of alienation," he added.

Dowson was one of the "decadent poets" who were considered as outcasts by major poets of the 19th century such as Tennyson and Browning. He was a non-conformist whose poems and lifestyle were not always accepted in Victorian England.

"We need to pay attention to neglected artists who are often stuck with the wrong label," Holt said, "and the title of the play, which came from one of Dowson's poems, reflects this."

Holt first began thinking of a play about Dowson two years ago. He began writing it in June of this year and only finished it in the fall. "You Would Have Understood Me . . ." had a cast of 19.

The festival was devoted to encouraging theater as an art in colleges and universities, Holt said, and it encouraged original plays.

Dr. Francis McBeth, Ouachita's resident composer, received the title of Composer Laureate of Arkansas from Former Gov. Bob Riley for his contributions in composing music.

Dr. W. Francis McBeth, professor of music and resident composer at Ouachita Baptist University, received the 1974-75 ASCAP Award, which was presented by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers (ASCAP).

Dr. McBeth had received the award each year since 1965. It was based on the value of the writer's catalog and performances of his compositions which were not reflected in the survey of performances. The award reflected the commitment of ASCAP to assist and encourage writers of serious music. An independent panel chose Dr. McBeth as the recipient of this year's award.

A member of the Ouachita faculty since 1957, Dr. McBeth received his master of music degree from the University of Texas in 1957 and his doctor of music degree from Hardin-Simmons University in 1971.

RESIDENT COMPOSER RECEIVES AWARD

Dr. McBeth was named one of the 10 most outstanding educational music directors in the United States and Canada for the 1973-74 school year by the School Musician Director and Teacher magazine. He was conductor of the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra from 1970-1973, and was named OBU's resident composer in 1968.

“Lifestyles at Ouachita are many and varied. Each person finds himself developing both socially and academically, although some prefer the former to the latter. In the classroom he develops intellectually by opening his mind to the views of others and evaluating these views for himself. He develops socially through participation in SELF activities, ball games, and most of all, through dorm life. Lifestyles in the dorm involve coping with roommates, fighting for dryers, playing “Baptist Shuffle,” watching Rhoda, sharing problems and joys, and occasionally, studying. I believe that one of the greatest assets Ouachita has is the professor-student interaction, which affects the lifestyles of many Ouachitonians in a positive way.”

ELF CHAIRMAN FEELS YEAR IS GOOD

"In the past year these two words have come to mean a lot more to me than just a rock concert. It has meant planning for a well-rounded program that meets the needs of all students. It also means creative programming in putting the different aspects of student activities concentrated around the Student Center.

We made some changes this year — some good, maybe some bad; we heard good comments as well as complaints. All in all, I feel it was a good year and that our efforts were not in vain. I hope next year more students will take the initiative to get involved now that they have seen the potential in this part of student life."

OUACHITA FORTUNATE FOR SCHOOL OF MUSIC

"We are fortunate at Ouachita to have one of the finest music departments in the state. The teachers are all well qualified and do a good job teaching in the different areas of music.

But there seems to be a strange sense of competition among them as there is between all musicians. Musicians are sensitive, dedicated people who get the most out of life because they give so much of themselves."

"The good old days weren't always so good. Even if we could go back in time, we would probably be disappointed to find that things weren't as great as we would like to remember them.

It does seem, however, that music and entertainment as a whole have lost a lot of the charm and warmth they possessed 20 or 30 years ago. Performers such as Clark Gable, Fred Astaire, and even the little children on the "Our Gang" comedies have not been replaced by our new entertainers. Audiences want the kind of special quality these people had, and I think this is the reason many of the old songs, plays, and movies have become popular again."

ROTC HAS MANY OPPORTUNITIES, SAYS LOCKE

"After having done the many things that are offered to R.O.T.C. cadets, I believe that military service is one of the many obligations of citizenship. I have become a more patriotic person through R.O.T.C., which develops the essential qualities of good and efficient officers.

R.O.T.C. has been good for me, because of the many opportunities it has given me to travel to various places for orientation and training. R.O.T.C. has made it possible for me to do things that are not normally available to the college student.

"Competition for a place in medical school is tremendous. It takes good grades, high MCAT scores, and good recommendations.

Here at Ouachita we are fortunate to have a very good science department. The professors are excellent — they have a vast store of knowledge and patience — and the classes are small enough that the student has access to the professor and can learn as much as he desires."

"There were many annual activities that were sponsored by the Senate in the fall — Homecoming, Blood Drive, Freshman elections, etc. There were also many other new ideas that were realized and a major one was the establishment of the Emergency Loan Fund for students. Another successful venture was the sponsoring of a contest between clubs on Choir Day in the area of best booths.

The tentative budget for the fall was the largest in recent years for the Senate in the amount of $3,780.98. This included the 50 percent funding of the Cheerleaders, a contribution to BASS from Black Emphasis Week and the funding of the Women's Volleyball Team.

A new committee was established in the Senate and is known as the Athletic Fund Committee. The purpose of this committee is to aid such athletic clubs as the Soccer and Rugby teams.

Probably the major accomplishment of the fall semester was the passage of the new proposed constitution. This constitution went into effect during the spring semester •"

"I think Christians should be going off on "deep theological tangents or "head trips" and get back to centering their lives around Jesus Christ. I know in my life when I started emphasizing some specific spiritual area, even though it may be real true that one thing becomes my lord. In the sight of the Cross and when it happens I'm really messed up. Fellowship among Christians could be so much sweeter and brothers and sisters could dwell together in unity and harmony if only we could learn to make everything secondary to the Lordship of Jesus in our lives."

FELTON TAKES definite STAND AGAINST MOVEMENT

"I take a definite stand against Women's Liberation in most aspects of the Liberation Movement. I personally feel that the woman's place is in the home and that she was placed on this earth as the weaker sex.

However, for those who do choose a career, I feel that with equal qualifications and status, they are entitled to equal pay with men.

One of the disagreements I have with Women's Lib is that the time may be coming when men will no longer open doors, pay for dinners, movies, and dates, because of changes brought about by the movement. Personally, I hope that that day never comes because it's fun being a girl!"

“Here at Ouachita, class attendance can sometimes be a problem. By a problem, I mean that a student can really feel pressured if he does not attend all of his classes regularly. If a student is not responsible enough to keep up with his work, then he will eventually suffer. But if a student can do his work well, and keep up with his assignments, then he shouldn't be made to feel guilty about missing every once in a while. From the teacher's point of view I can see how frustrating it would be to try to teach an empty classroom. I feel that Ouachita could take a positive attitude to the situation by giving the student an incentive to attend class.”

DORM LIFE IS ESSENTIAL

"I think dorm life is especially essential for incoming freshmen. All being stuck as newcomers in the same predicament has something comforting about it. I know many people thought that my roommate and I would never make it, because we seemed so opposite. It was assuring that first semester that we learned you've got to finally give up and accept each other for what you are.

The whole atmosphere of dorm life has changed every year. The first year was full of making adjustments and pulling pranks and irresponsibility. The second year everyone seemed to be more reserved but still there was plenty of goofing around."

PEOPLE SHOULD LEARN TO ACCEPT MK'S AS PEOPLE

"Being an M.K. is like being put on a pedestal. People expect you to be such a great example of Lottie Moon herself. Of course, I believe in what my parents do, but my parents aren't me. People expect an M.K. to be an American all the way, but don't realize that you've lived half your life, or all of it in another country. I wish people would learn to accept me and other M.K.'s as ourselves . . . as people."

"As a student at OBU, I have found that there are a few restrictions on my freedom. Unlike our coeds, male students can leave and come at any hour, don't have to sign out or in and are able to smoke in the dorms. In most classes there are restrictions as to how many absences are allowed; this is according to your instructors. It is a big change from high school and your first year is really a test of will power. You can discipline yourself to the environment or end up going home permanently."

CHILDREN'S THEATRE; AUDIENCE RESPONSIVE

"Children's Theatre is probably one of the most exciting things done at Ouachita each year. Not only in the fact that we do about 25 performances all over the state, but also the kids love themselves. Children are not only the most difficult audience to play for, but are also the most responsive and appreciative when you do a good job."

"In past years the status of Ouachita's tennis team has been far below that of the men's. This was for all the wrong reasons—just because we were women. But as our state record last year proves, we are champions. This effort will only be rewarded when the legislature decides to pass Title IX of the HEW bill and by added support of our own student body members."

“Being away from home has made me a little more independent both emotionally and financially.

College was my first big break from home and being so far away has forced me to handle my problems without consulting my parents.

Financially, I've become more money conscious and have developed ways of conserving my money for important events •”

COLLEGE FIRST BREAK FROM HOME

The first year of college means many things...

Beginning Adventure Observing Promising
Traumatic Hassle Obligated Loyalty Individual
Develop Lifestyle Remember Struggle

By Debbi Russell

This first year of college meant different things to various freshmen. For some, it marked the beginning of a new adventure; for others, it was simply viewed as a scholastic necessity; still others felt that it was a struggle for survival, with no fun in it at all.

"Observation" was the password when the freshmen first moved on campus. Upperclassmen were checking out the new girls for promising prospects. The upperclass women looked the freshmen girls over to see if there were any "threats" who might need continued surveillance. The freshmen just tried to look at everything.

Registration was probably the most traumatic experience of the entire year. As if it weren't bad enough that most of the freshmen were almost totally lost, closed classes and rain added to the hassle. It was hard to smile sweetly for I.D. pictures after standing outside in the rain for half an hour.

Students opinions about freshmen orientation were widely divergent. Freshmen bought beanies and were obligated to button to all seniors. They woke early and sang to the Tiger every morning for a week. Delinquent freshmen were required to face the perils of Kangaroo Court, where they were tried and punished for their crimes by seniors.

The purpose of orientation was to instill loyalty to Ouachita and the Tiger, and to create a bond between freshmen and seniors. Reactions ranged from those who felt that the idea was great and successful, to those who held that orientation only created greater polarization between the two classes.

After all that, students began to settle down and become more individual. They got to know lots of people and began to develop their own campus lifestyle.

When these same students return next fall, they'll feel a little superior to the new group of freshmen. They'll feel like everything is just routine. But, deep down, they will remember the year when they were freshmen, and they know there will never be another quite like it •

Observations

"I remember when I first came to Ouachita I felt like this was just another camp-type experience. During orientation we had lots of free time and my roommate and I played game after game of cards. I had been apprehensive about having a roommate after eighteen years of having my own room. It was fun to decorate our room, but disheartening to work on something for hours and then have it look hilarious when you put it up. Dormlife did have advantages to other situations, though, because when studies got unbearable, you could break the monotony with a shaving cream fight or by playing a joke on someone."

college life GIVES AN ABUNDANCE OF FREEDOMS

"College life gives us many varied freedoms. We have the freedom to choose our life's work, to determine our degree of social and spiritual involvement, and the freedom to establish meaningful relationships with other people. I think the greatest freedom we have is the right to develop as unique individuals."

CURFEW ON FRESHMEN IS A BLESSING

"The curfew imposed on freshmen women is a blessing in disguise.

At times I wished we had no curfew but it made me settle down and study.

The nine o'clock curfew during the first six weeks brought us closer together and we got better acquainted.

There's not anything to do in Arkadelphia after ten o'clock so I feel I didn't miss anything by being in early."

"Entering Ouachita began a new and different kind of life for me. Everything seemed so different that at first I didn't think I could handle it. One group that helped me more than anything was the Missionary Baptist Student Fellowship at Barring Cross Missionary Church. Until I met the people in this group the only people I knew were the girls on my floor in the dorm. I felt accepted by the MBSF from the beginning and they led me to new friends.

I would like to say "thank you" to everyone that has given me help and encouragement. I love Ouachita and am glad that I'm here."

COLLEGE BETTER THAN EXPECTED

"Before I came to Ouachita, I heard a lot of different stories about what college life would be like. Some people said it was great, others had quite a different opinion!

Now that I've been here and have judged for myself, I've realized that college is even better than what I had expected it would be. It was really kind of hard at first though, adjusting to the dorm life, meeting new friends, and getting used to the cafeteria food! But once I made it past those crucial first few weeks (including our freshman initiation) I knew I was going to like college. I just kept telling myself that things had to get better (because they couldn't get any worse!) and sure enough they did."

Even though Ouachita is a Baptist school, we're allowed a great deal of freedom to form our own ideas and to worship as we choose. I think the faculty is great in the way they apply the Christian life in the classroom as well as out. As far as the students are concerned I think there is some sincere searching and growth going on. The attitudes of students and faculty toward religion are probably more positive than ever before."

“Commuting to me is one big pain! Not only do I get tired of driving back and forth from Malvern every day, but I feel left out of events at home and at school. Another thing is . . . teachers don’t seem to consider the commuting students when they give an assignment requiring attendance at a night affair. Living at home does have its advantages, like having your own room and eating the food that you’re used to—your Mom’s. I feel that commuting has kept my grades down from what they could be, because of the hour it takes out of my day driving. When I finally get home there is no decent place to study. The problems just never end.”

—Jennifer Stilwell
