

Adams to Zimmerman and more

A month of madness. It all began quietly in the fall with informal drop-ins and mixers, but when the spring semester arrived, rush week hit like a bomb as backdrops were brought out of storage and members spent hours preparing skits, programs and the food for their various rush parties.

And finally the last preference sheet was turned in, the last vote was counted, and each woman's social club proudly received its pledge class. "Bid Day" arrived and many came to the front lawn of Cone Bottoms and to the Tiger to watch what was called "the Races." For more see page 116

Strengthening our athletic condition. A little over a year ago, the track that encircled the football field underwent a dramatic change. The entire surface was scalped and resurfaced in an attempt to update the quality of the running ribbon. The renovation consisted of covering the stripped area with a much improved synthetic surface. That type of covering was resistant to weather, and the track was usable during inclement weather because of the quality. This renovation was made possible by a gift from North Little Rock resident Charles Jackson, a graduate of OBU. For more see page 186.

Was all that money worth it?

Being a private university has its disadvantages, namely expenses. With the higher price tag on a private education, supporters feared a slump in student enrollment. In 1982-83 the slump came. But according to administrative personnel, the slump was not a direct result of increased cost. "When economic times are tough," said Dr. Coulter, "enrollment shifts from private to public institutions. However, our lower enrollment was a result of there being fewer high school students to attract."

Fun for funds. Tiger Traks, sponsored by the Ouachita Student Foundation, was a campus-wide weekend of competition and fun. It did, however, have a purpose — to raise money for scholarships.

Superstars and superteams competed on the football field in areas of dodge and jump, softball throw, bowling, 440-yard run, 100-yard dash, swimming, rope climbing and obstacle course.

Superteams composed of high school students from churches throughout Arkansas competed in a Volkswagen push, relay race, frisbee throw, tug-of-war and egg toss.

Happily ever after. Marriage had its rewards (no curfew!), but even the single student had difficulty enough finding time for study, work, non-academic pursuits and friends - without the added demands of a spouse to consider.

Because of the time and financial elements involved, evenings out were less frequent for most couples. But if marriage wasn't exactly a boon to social life, it was in many cases helpful academically - or at least it didn't hurt, married students said.

For some marriage meant major upheavals in their lives; for others it was not a big adjustment.

DOUBLE PROJECTS. Laura and Kevin Grisham spend time together working on their individual hobbies. Laura commented, "Being married is just like living in the dorm except Kevin's a guy. He's my best friend." - photo by David Nash

A final note.

Friday, March 11th, 2:50 pm, one hour and forty-five minutes to tie up loose ends and package our book together. It seemed impossible that our half-empty ladder last month would turn into a completed swarm of red "X's".

I'd like to go to sleep and forget about writing this last note, but when I look back at the past week and remember all the hours staffers put into this deadline, I feel that they deserve a word of thanks.

Ken, David, and Tracy: Somehow you printed all of our orders and stayed awake unbelievable hours at a time. Great job.

Paula and Beth L.: Although you were not paid to work, I could always depend on you having your work completed on time.

John: Those last two all-nighters on the community pages proved to me that you are as talented as I believed.

Robin and Terry: I wondered about your capabilities at the outset, but was very pleased with your work.

Our Ohio group: Our work and hopes paid off. We are going to have a great book. Bow, did you live in the office?

Of course, I also thank everybody who donated time and effort to help make our book come about.

And Beth: You are very creative. The staff benefited from your work. And also a very special thanks for being you.

Tim Wooldridge, editor

UNDER THE HIGH GLOSS

Life at the world of Ouachita had its expected norms. Posters in the cafeteria, chapel announcements, and a "brief intermission" at the 50-cent movies became ritual elements.

Even the entering freshmen quickly learned the little quirks that made us unique. We all dug for coupons for our Sunday night meal, joked about those tiny steps in the plaza and tried to remember the words to the tune playing on the chimes.

UNDER THE HIGH GLOSS

Sometimes the uniqueness of our lifestyle worked against us. Those around us couldn't understand why we lived the way we did. We were viewed not only through our accomplishments but through the way we lived each day.

This led to our high gloss image. Others labelled us as students who dressed up every day, wore sparkling smiles and would say hello to anybody on campus.

FIELD STUDY. Leaf collections and Botony studies often required out-of-class time to identify and recognize plants.

A LOOK IN. As the spirit of Christmas hit campus, seasonal symbols appeared. In celebration of the holiday, Connie Dalton and Vicki Gill decorate their door and a miniature tree. — photo by David Nash

But the stereotype image harbored one huge fault — the label didn't fit everyone. We were a mixture of individuals with different likes, preferences and attitudes.

Our high gloss image was different and often criticized as being hypocritical. But a closer look, under the high gloss, showed that much of what was seen on the outside existed on the inside.

CHAPEL.
Our high gloss image possibly started from our religious emphasis. Although different lifestyles existed on campus, most all centered around our christian influence. — photo by Ken Shaddox

COLOPHON

Volume 74 of the Ouachita Baptist University Ouachitonian was printed by the offset lithography process by the Walsworth Publishing Company, 306 North Kansas Ave., Marceline, Missouri, 64658. Tom Walker was the representative.

All photographs were taken by staff photographers and printed in the school's photo lab. Color pictures in the opening were taken by Ouachitonian photographers using internegatives processed by Mizell Photography Corporation of Dallas, Texas. James Burge Photography, Inc., of North Little Rock printed the color and was also responsible for taking the people section portraits.

Spot color in the opening was selected from the Pantone series 273U and 127U.

Headline typesetters were handset using Chartpak lettering. The faces included: Student Life — Caslon 540; Academics — Souvenir Medium; Organizations — Benguiat Medium; Sports — Helvetica Bold Extended; People — Melior; Community — Caslon 540; Special Features — Bookman Bold; Theme Pages — Americana Extra Bold.

Subheads and kickers were set in fourteen point. The styles included: Optima, Souvenir Light Italic, Bodoni Bold Italic, Palatino Bold, and Clarendon.

Body copy was set in nine point Clarendon. On theme pages body copy was set in fourteen point. Captions were set in eight point Melior Italic with caption headlines set in eight point Clarendon. On theme pages captions were set in eleven point. Blurbs were set in twelve point Clarendon.

All layouts were designed by the staff using a variety of styles, including a floating three-plus-one (Student Life), six-plus-one (Academics), four (Organizations), three (Sports, People), two-plus-one (Special Features), free-style (theme pages).

All copy was written by staff members, student contributors and News Bureau writers.

The 296-page book was printed on 80-pound frostbite matte paper. 1900 books were printed.

A mission grain was used on the cover.

The Ouachitonian is a member of Columbia Scholastic Press Association, the Arkansas College Publications Association and the Associate Collegiate Press. The 1981 Ouachitonian received the Gold Crown Award from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. The 1982 Ouachitonian received a Medalist rating from the CSPA, and an All-American rating from the Associated Collegiate Press.
