MAKE-UP FOR THE STAGE
BY MICHAEL TINSLEY

FALL SEMESTER 1972
INTRODUCTION

Experience never ceases to be the best method of instruction. It is for this reason that I decided to pursue as my special study in make-up for the stage, the chairmanship of the make-up design for Ouachita Theater's fall productions.

My interest in the theater was increased when I became involved with past productions at Ouachita. In a summer course in 1972, the intrigue of stage make-up became especially interesting. The concepts of being able to alter physical appearance to aid in taking on a different character by brushing and blending color on the face is the basis of stage make-up; the effects of a well done make-up can startle and even fool a person. This, then, was the element that first sparked my interest in attempting this work.
BEGINNINGS

The first step for the make-up designing is an individual character analysis. For the production of The Glass Menagerie, there were four characters to plan for. Their individual character sketches follow on the next few pages....
AMANDA WINGFIELD

I. Physical Description:

Age: Fifties
Race: White
Health: Good
Physical Type: Thin
Facial Structure: Aging
Color of Skin, Hair: Pale and Graying
Beauty-Ugliness: Fading Beauty

II. Psychological Character:

Sufficiently intelligent to realize her situation and perhaps lacking in reasoning as to how to overcome it.

She wants to establish for herself and her unmarried daughter, a comfortable existence; her determination and dominence over her children will help her get it; her lack of malice and love for her son will keep her from getting it.

Her temperament is mainly domineering; resulting in impatience and sometimes anger; at the bottom of all of this is her true goodness and love.

III. Social Character:

American; Protestant; Housewife; Mother;
Member DAR;

She is existing in a shabby apartment; never going out much; in constant worry of her son deserting her.
TOM WINGFIELD

I. Physical Description:

Age; Twenties
Race; White
Health; Good
Physical Type; Moderately Sedate; indoors job
Facial Structure; Hard lined and shaped
Color of Skin, Hair; Healthy but not ruddy, blond
Beauty-Ugliness: Average

II. Psychological Character:

Intelligent; writes poetry; not content with his situation either; has means to get out but doubts as to leaving his family unsupported.

He wants to move; get out of his depressed state by going places; tries to substitute with escape of watching movies, drinking, and dreaming.

He is sometimes cruel and may seem to be always pessimistic and hard; he is really a sensitive individual.

III. Social Character:

American; Factory Worker; son; Member of Merchant Marine; Poet at heart.

He works in a shoe factory by days and by night goes to movies, drinks in bars, and writes.
LAURA WINGFIELD

I. Physical Description:

Age: Twenties
Race: White
Health: Good
Physical Type: Sedate, has slight limp caused from attack of pleurosis in teen years.
Facial Structure: Soft lines.
Color of Skin; Hair: Pale, Blond.
Beauty-Ugliness: Pretty but Unobtrusive.

II. Psychological Character:

Intelligent but without goal; extremely shy; willing to exist but not live.
Her motives are secretive; she realizes her situation but seems content to remain dormant; she feels imperfect and thus does not attempt to express her feelings.

III. Social Character:

American; High School Drop-out; a Dud.
Her potential is undeveloped.
JIM O'CONNOR

I. Physical Description:

Age; Twenties
Race; White
Health; Good
Physical Type; Athlete in past, now much less active;
Facial Structure; Good Looking.
Color of Skin; Hair; Healthy and Blond
Beauty-Ugliness; Good Looking and Attractive.

II. Psychological Character:

Intelligent and ambitious; popular in high school;
Studying radio and television.
He wants to establish himself in every social situation; in marriage, business, and fame.
His situation in relation to Wingfields is one of a passing acquaintance.

III. Social Character;

American; High School Hero; Singer; Potentially Successful.
The next step after character analysis is the individual make-up plan. For each person to step by step create a correctly perportioned face or the illusion of old age, an itemized guide is prepared by the designer. Make-up Plans for the four characters in The Glass Menagerie follow on the next few pages....

TO DEMONSTRATE

To supplement the other material here, there follows a pictorial make-up demonstration very similar to that performed on the actress who played Amanda Wingfield in The Glass Menagerie.

Exposure No. 1- The actress as she appears with no make-up; her face has been cleaned with cold cream to prepare the face for make-up.

Exposure No. 2- Showing one side of the face with highlight and shadow as it appears when applied with brush; the other side has been blended.

Exposure No. 3- The side which has not been blended; Notice the highlight and shadow on specific areas such as forehead, temple, eye, nose, mouth, cheek and jouls, chin and neck.

Exposure No. 4- The side which was blended.

Exposure No. 5- Both sides now have been blended.

Exposure No. 6- Blush on the Cheeks, eye shadow of a pale color blue, and lip rouge have been added; the hair has been gathered in back to complete the effect of this demonstration.

Exposure No. 7- Pictured are the materials that were used; tissue, cold cream, three base colors, liner for shadow, clown white for highlight, hair pins, cheek blusher, lip rouge, eye shadow, and powder.

IN CONCLUSION

The material presented in this portfolio represents many more hours work than it took to prepare it. Among the duties which have not been mentioned of the Chairman of Make-up is to assist in preparation for each performance, and after the performance to clean the mess which has been forgotten in the excitement.

The study was rewarding and enjoyable. The excitement of the theatre is one of experience; as well as being enjoyable it is a learning tool.
