- I. Arias from the Solo CantatasAntonio Vivaldi
Pur ch'a te grata
O di tua man mi svena
In grata so mi svena
- II. De Kuss (The Kiss)Ludwig Van Beethoven
One day when alone with Chloe, I decided to chance a kiss. Although she vowed she would cry out should I try, I kissed her. And did she? Oh, yes, she did—but a long while afterwards.
- An den Sonnenschein (O Shining Sun) Robert Schumann O shining sun, thy brightness has won my heart, and awakened thoughts of love within my breast.
- Ich grolle nicht (I chide thee not)Robert Schumann I'll not complain although my heart should break.
Long ago I knew you would cause me grief. I saw the serpent that preyed on your heart and knew unhappiness would come to you and me. So I'll not complain.
- III. Bois Epais (All Your Shades)Jean Baptiste Lully
All your shades, ye woods, fold around me! A deeper horror I have found, now love's brief day is done.
These poor wearied eyes dim with sorrow, no more to see the sun.

Le Vallon (The Valley)Charles Gounod
Happy home of my youth, thou valley all enchanted, back to thee I return to await here the end.

Le Cor (The Horn)A. Flegier I love the sounding horn, at eve, in forest far; when it sings of the fate of wounded roe at bay, or the hunters farewell, in faintest echo dying; The far away northwind replying through leafy boughs.

IV. Recitative and Aria (Ernani)Guisseppi Verdi Infelice! e tu credeui (Unhappy One!)

The Spanish nobleman, Silva enters the boudoir of his betrothed, Elvira, and finds no less than two suits fighting for her love. Understandably surprised, he cries out: "What do I see? Here in my own house, two base seducers with my promised wife!" He calls in his retainers to witness the scene, and soliloquizes: "Unhappy! You thought she was pure . . . Why has age, that thins my locks, not turned my heart to ice?"
